Enabling Similarity Check for Assignments in TISSOL

- Login to your TISSOL account (<https://tissol.tiss.ac.in/>)
- Click on specific course that you wish to work on
- In this case, we have clicked on course “LIS-05: Information Communication Technology and Libraries (Theory and Practice)”

- Select “Enable editing mode” at right hand top corner. The same page will open with edit tools

- You need to add assignments first. Only then you can use Similarity Check Turnitin Tool

CREATING ASSIGNMENTS

- Under each Topic / Week, you can create assignments as per need
- Click on “Add an Activity or resource”

The screenshot shows the 'New Assignment' form in the TISS LMS. The form is titled 'New Assignment' and has a sidebar on the left with a list of course items. The main form area has a 'General' tab selected. The 'Assignment name' field contains 'Boolean Logic gates'. The 'Description' field is empty, with a rich text editor toolbar above it. The 'Activity instructions' field is also empty, with a rich text editor toolbar above it. The 'Display description on course page' checkbox is unchecked. The sidebar on the left lists various course items, including 'General', 'Student's Presentation To...', 'Course Details', 'Recommended Readings', 'Lecture Notes by Mr Akhil...', and 'Week 1'. The 'Week 1' section is expanded, showing a list of lecture notes.

- In the pop up menu of activities, select “Assignment”
- Provide Assignment details, like title, description if any
- Define assignment start and due dates
- Do not change any other default parameters listed
- Click Save and Display
- Your Assignment is created and ready for students submission.

for housing. Consequence is upward pressure on land values within areas that can be developed, and this again stimulates speculative real-estate activity and illegal encroachments in controlled zones.

Typologies of housing capture the unbalanced nature of city growth. Original gaothan and chawl-type housing remains within traditional settlements. The majority of mid-rise apartments that were constructed in the 1980s and 1990s now suffer from structural wear and tear. Informal settlements have spread to industrial and peri-urban areas, including Kashimira, where industrial slums provide housing to large groups of migrant workers. Concomitantly, gated communities and high-rise apartments for upper middle-class residents have been constructed, though these tend to be unsupported by proper underlying infrastructure.

Employment rates in Mira-Bhayandar are still comparatively low. Planning sources say that no more than 39 percent of the city's population are employed. This means lower levels of affordability for most households, who can barely finance building maintenance or save up for redevelopment schemes. As a result, families continue to stock.
